COURSE DESCRIPTION:

Class is mostly indoors, but students will visit their outdoor backyard too. This class is both informative and fun! Explore your own backyard. Draw nature and things in your backyard. Start or expand your Nature Journal. Drawing the things of nature helps people to learn about nature. This is a drawing class, a nature class, and a show-n-tell class. On Zoom, talk with classmates about your art, nature journal, and nature in your backyard. In class, we'll draw things such as sticks, leaves, autumn scenes, tracks, animals, the backyard landscape, backyard map, etc. Each day of class, there will be a few different drawing activities, indoors, as well as one or two nature-exploration activities, outdoors, in your backyard. There will be a lot of free-hand sketching, as well as some tracing too. Plus, students will write at least a little about their backyard and sketches, in their Journal. Parents may help with writing for young students.

Recommended: during class, at least for the first few days of class, parents should assist students with Zoom and the class, for students who are under age 12.
